Penguin - Horror for Kindle The narrator of the story is a very unusual young man: He grows up in his parents' home with his maternal grandfather, who is an alchemist who teaches him how to become a wizard. The young man trains hard, but his initial skills are rather weak. The following story takes place during the First World War, in London. Jannis Steffen. Excelsior Digital Instead of working as a professional enchanter, the narrator works as a temp worker at the study of a powerful wizard. The story takes place in the wizard's study, where the wizard tells the young man about the magical worlds and about the many abilities he has. The young man, who is rather naive, asks many questions about the magical worlds and learns many things. The wizard teaches him how to read and write magical spells. Within a short time the young man has become a very good enchanter. However, the wizard tests the young man, who has become enchanter in the wizard's study. The test is made by the young man's grandfather, who tries to prove that the young man is not really a good enchanter, but a mere apprentice. After the test, the grandfather explains everything to the young man and advises him that he has to leave the wizard's study. The young man wants to remain at the wizard's side and wants to become a full enchanter. But the wizard is too powerful, and the young man must leave the wizard's study. He is then sent to a wizard in the East. This wizard will train the young man in the trade of an enchanter. The young man's work is to prepare his spellbooks in order to use them. In a short time he becomes the most successful enchanter in the East. He earns a lot of money and he travels to many different countries, where he performs many magic tricks. It is time to return to his homeland, and he is also waiting for his fiancée. However, one day he receives a letter from a woman, who tells him 82157476af
